W. M. Porter Is Special County Judge

Bee County Bar Elects Him to Serve Until Beasley Returns

W. M. Porter, an attorney connected with the Dougherty & Dougherty law offices for a number of years, was elected special county judge by the Bee County Bar at a meeting held in the county courtroom last Thursday afternoon.

The action was taken by the practicing attorneys of Bee County as a measure to prevent the closing of litigation in county, probate, and juvenile courts during the absence of County Judge R. J. Beasley.

Judge Beasley went to Mayo Brothers hospital in Rochester several weeks ago, and last week underwent a surgical operation. It is believed he will be absent from the courtroom approximately three months.

In following the necessary procedure, Sheriff Vail Ennis made a public proclamation at the courthouse door at 2 p. m. Thursday, announcing that the election would be held.

The following practicing attorneys were present: O. Kennedy, Keese Wade, L. D. Stroud, W. M. Porter, R. L. Cox, George P. Morrill, and John C. Beasley.

Six votes were cast, and Mr. Porter was unanimously elected to serve as special county judge until Judge Beasley returns to his office. District Judge W. G. Gayle administered the oath of office.

The commissioners court will meet in regular session Saturday, at which time they will be asked to approve Mr. Porter's bond. When that is done, Mr. Porter will be ready to serve as county judge.

Boy Scouts Have Begun Their Drive For Old Papers

The Boy Scouts of Troop 200 started their drive for old newspapers and magazines last week and will continue until they have collected enough for a carload shipment, Scoutmaster Marion Young said this morning.

The citizens of Beeville are requested to stack their newspapers and magazines, in separate stacks, and await the arrival of the boys, who will tie them in bundles and take them to the storage room.

Mr. Young said the boys want to complete the drive before the beginning of school, and will appreciate the cooperation of the people.

TWO ARE MISSING—First Lieut. Pat Quinn of Cadiz, extreme right, kneeling, and Major Keith Merrill of Spofford, Ariz., second kneeling, have been reported lost in action over Japan since July 3. Others, kneeling, are officers, and the men standing complete the crew which had bombed Japan 32 times before meeting disaster on the 33rd mission July 3. All but two have been reported rescued, but details are lacking. Lt. Quinn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dolph Quinn. (Picture taken on Saipan, where B-29 bomber was based.)

Lt. Pat Quinn Reported Missing Over Jap Islands

Mr. and Mrs. Dolph Quinn of Cadiz have been notified by the War Department that their son, First Lt. Pat Quinn, has been missing in action over Japan since July 3, 1945.

The message from Edward P. Eistell, acting adjutant general of the War Department, was received in Beeville Saturday, July 28. It confirmed fears that had been growing in the hearts of his parents and other relatives and friends that perhaps Lt. Quinn's luck had run out. He was known to be nearing his scheduled final mission. There was, of course, the hope that he had completed his missions and was on the way home, but as no letters or telegrams came, that hope was beginning to fade. His last letter was written July 2, and was received by Mr. and Mrs. Quinn a week later.

Lt. Quinn, flight engineer on a B-29 Superfortress, had been based on Saipan since going to the Pacific in July of 1944. He was awarded the Air Medal for his participation in the early bombings of Tokyo and was promoted to First Lieutenant early this year. He is a graduate of A. C. Jones high school, class of 1939, and was in his senior year, majoring in mechanical engineering at A&M College, when he volunteered for service in the AAF.

He was sent to Yale and completed the aeronautical course there in December, 1943. He was (See "LT. QUINN," Page Five.)

"Fourth: The trustees, in their discretion, may permit crippled, maimed, or diseased children falling within said three classes to be admitted for treatment in said hospital and permit them to be treated and cared for, even though such children shall not interfere with those charged with their care, parents or otherwise, are able to pay for said treatment; but no charge shall be made for said treatment, always provided, however, that the admission of such children shall not interfere with the care of the particular children for whom this trust is primarily intended. then sent to Seattle, where he took a course in the Boeing airplane factory, studying the machine of the B-29.

His first flying was at Wendover, Utah, for bombing practice, and later in Nevada before going to Clovis, N. M., for final training with his crew before going overseas.

Lt. Quinn had 500 combat hours in the air, built up over the long and arduous campaign over targets in Japan and had one of the bombings required more than 15 hours in the air. He and his crew were in the B-29s when they reported lost when 600 B-29s were sent out to bomb Japan's dwindling oil resources on the morning of July 3, Japanese time. Only two ships were reported lost out of the force of 20 of the 22 men aboard were reported rescued.

Major Merrill's father, residing in Dallas in Nebraska, before Mrs. Quinn to give them all information he has been able to gather from many sources. He was contacted at last by Cpl. John C. Jones, who is based on Salpuga and was acquainted with Merrill and members of his crew.

Cpl. Jones said that no distress message had come from the ship and that he does not know what happened. It is possible Merrill and Quinn are Japanese prisoners of war.

Cpl. Jones stated the B-29 piloted by Merrill had three major accidents who had gone along for the ride, and that a most extensive search had been made for the missing men.

One report received by Mr. Merrill said that the crew members had been picked up by a submarine. Just what did happen will not be known until some number of the crew reports.
